CAIPE Honorary Fellowships for 2017

An Honorary CAIPE Fellowship is a prestigious title awarded for five years to an individual who is a CAIPE member and has made significant and outstanding contributions to IPE, collaborative working and the organisation. It is awarded in anticipation that the individual will continue with on-going activity with and for CAIPE as long as they remain a CAIPE member.

The nomination committee would like to take this opportunity to invite further nominations for Honorary CAIPE Fellowships. As stated in the documentation, this invitation will be held open for the next six months but please note any documentation received by a deadline of 1/6/17 will be in time for a decision to be made and, if successful, to be announced at the AGM on 15/6/17.

Applicants may apply directly for the award of the title but seek the support of two named CAIPE members to act as nominators. Alternatively, two CAIPE members may approach someone they wish to nominate. Documentation for nominations should be sent to admin@caipe.org

Nexus Award Nominations Now Open.

The National Center for Interprofessional Practice and Education is now accepting nominations for the 2017 Nexus Award, presented at Nexus Summit 2017.

The Nexus Award celebrates exemplary interprofessional practice in the US and those who are thinking and acting differently where education and practice connect in health and health care.

The award recognizes an educational institution, health system, clinic, and/or community organization for extraordinary contributions to the Nexus, linking health professions education and interprofessional practice to transform care delivery, improve health outcomes, and decrease costs.

Students turn interprofessional education into a competition

Interprofessional education at UMKC's health sciences schools has spawned an interprofessional competition

Nearly 50 students from the schools of dentistry, medicine, nursing and pharmacy worked together as members of nine interprofessional teams putting their combined skills to the test in the first Interprofessional Education and Collaboration Healthcare Reasoning Competition.

Turning Healthcare around: Health professionals learning together makes for better healthcare.

How many times have you told your story over and over again to health professionals? Poor communication between clinicians can turn health care into a bad experience.

The University of Otago, Wellington (UOW) is turning this around through an interprofessional education (IPE) programme introduced in recent years for students across the disciplines – dietetics, medicine, physiotherapy, and radiation therapy. This year pharmacy interns have also been included in the Wellington campus programme.

For three weeks in March, 64 health professional students learned together to better understand how to manage patients with “long-term health conditions” and their roles in giving team-based care. With an ageing population, long-term condition management is becoming a major burden on society.

Sleep and mental health in children and young people, 2 June 2017, Bristol, UK

Sleep difficulties are common in children and adolescents, especially in some high-risk groups, such as young people with developmental difficulties or mental health problems. Clinicians working in paediatric or child mental health settings need an understanding of sleep disorders, how sleep disturbance impacts on a young person's physical and cognitive development and mental health and how such disorders can be prevented and treated.

During this one-day conference the following aspects will be covered;

- The basic neurobiology of sleep including psychological and physical effects of poor sleep
- Sleep disorders and their treatment
- The use of medication in sleep disorders

AFRICA INTERPROFESSIONAL EDUCATION NETWORK

1st Symposium for
INTERPROFESSIONAL EDUCATION IN AFRICA

INVITATION AND CALL FOR ABSTRACTS

21 – 22 September 2017
University of Namibia, Windhoek, Namibia

1st Symposium for Interprofessional Education in Africa

The Africa Interprofessional Education Network (AfrIPEN) and the University of Namibia invite you to the First Symposium for Interprofessional Education in Africa.

This symposium follows the establishment of AfrIPEN in 2015 and the Network's first strategic planning workshop in 2016.

AfrIPEN's aim is to establish interprofessional education and collaborative practice (IPE) as integral part in training the health workforce and in the effective functioning of systems for health in Sub-Saharan Africa by advocating for, collaborating on, promoting and sharing good practice of IPE.

Collaboration and participation from all stakeholders are important. All participants are expected to share their experiences (whether they present an abstract or not) and learn from each other. This will not be a symposium where you can just sit back and listen. Participation is required! Accepted presentations will be posted on the www.afripen.org website.

Nexus

Today, a very real and substantial gap exists between health professions education and health care delivery in the United States. The goal of the National Center Nexus is to bridge this gap by creating a deeply connected, integrated learning system to transform education and care together.

Prehospital Care Research Forum Alert – Train Together, Work Together.

Each month the Prehospital Care Research Forum combs the literature to identify recent studies that are relevant to EMS education practices. In this segment, PCRFB board member Megan Corry shares her insight on a journal article that can help bring evidence-based practices to EMS education.

In 2010, the World Health Organization (WHO) published the Framework for Action on Interprofessional Education and Collaborative Practice, calling for health professions programs to embrace interdisciplinary training with the goal of improving health outcome of patients. This process is not simple, since each discipline has its own specific set of competencies, accreditation standards and structured curriculum.

One step in the direction of interprofessional training would be to develop a set of common student learning outcomes independent of those within each discipline to specify competencies that all healthcare professionals should be able to demonstrate on completion of their initial training program. This should go beyond simple “communication skills,” and encompass an appreciation and knowledge of other professions and how each contributes to the healthcare team.

In this qualitative study, the authors conducted a systematic review of six Australian national and international interprofessional competency frameworks and mapped these frameworks to each other and to the Australian Learning and Teaching Council (ALTC) learning outcomes statements for health and medicine. The goal was to develop a single set of measurable learning outcomes that could be applied to all of the healthcare professions.

This study is a first step in the Australian healthcare system toward meaningful interprofessional teaching and learning and collaborative practice in the health professions as previously mentioned in our February Newsletter.

American Speech–Language–Hearing Association (ASHA)'s 10 year plan to promote IPE

Alex Johnson (Speech Pathology in the USA) is a small profession that is often overlooked. The profession is increasingly engaging in IPE.

One example of this is the recent publication in the USA of a Special Interest Group (SIG) Reader on IPE/IPP by the American Speech–Language–Hearing Association (ASHA), an organisation which also represents audiologists. This document forms part of the organisation's vision for 2025 to be realised through a 10 year strategic plan placing interprofessional education and interprofessional practice at the heart of high quality services.
