Nexus Summit 2017 Pre-Conference Workshop: Wellbeing and Resilience for Health Professionals

Stress and burnout among health professionals is an issue that can have a profound effect on the personal health of individuals in care teams, the culture of entire organizations, as well as patient safety and quality of care. Mary Jo Kreitzer, PhD, Rn, FANN, founder and director of the Center for Spirituality and Healing at the University of Minnesota, will be presenting a pre-conference workshop at Nexus Summit 2017 to share how individuals and teams can address this serious issue.

In addition to her director role, Mary Jo is current co-chair of the National Academy of Medicine Global Forum on Innovation in Health Professions Education. Learn more about Dr. Kreitzer and watch her TEDxUMN talk.

If you'd like to attend this pre-conference workshop, be sure to add it to your Nexus Summit registration.

What does the future of education look like?

Do you think nursing education will look the same in 2030 as it does today?

Over the next few years we will radically change the standards that set out how both nurses and midwives are educated.

This week the NMC launched a consultation to find out what you think about our proposals for the future of nursing education. And now that midwifery supervision has changed, they are also preparing our proposals for midwifery education.

Students, educators, nurses and members of the public across the UK have told them what they think will change between now and 2030, and with their help, the NMC have produced new draft standards. The draft standards include:

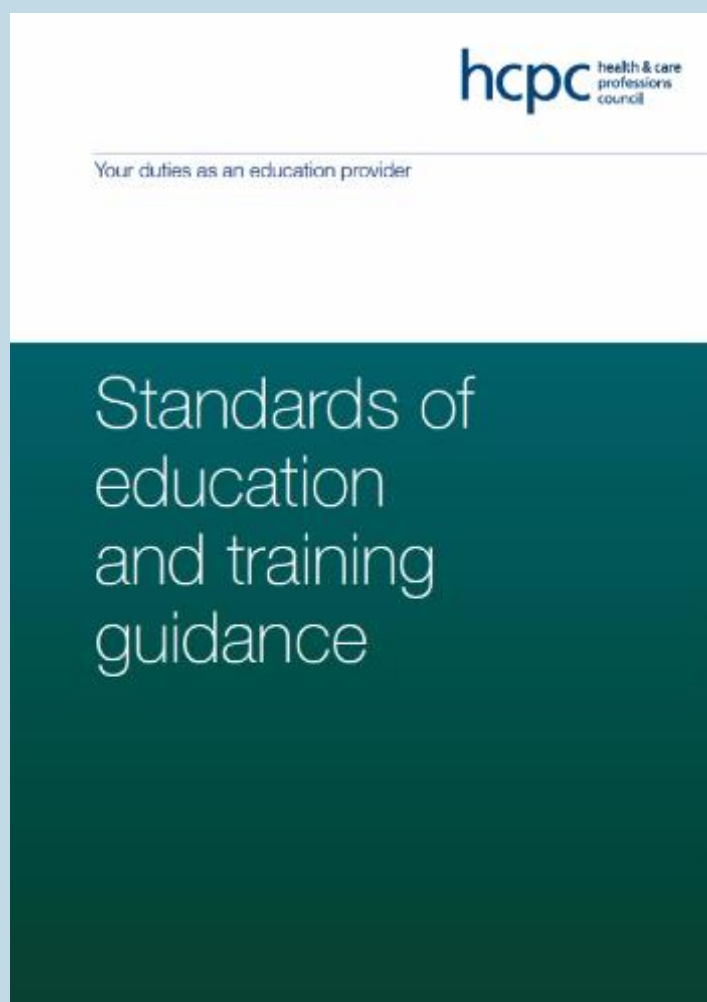

- draft standards for education – these set out how students will be trained and educated in the future
- draft standards of proficiency – these set out what nurses will be able to do when they join the register

- our proposals for prescribing.

These draft standards will make sure that the nurses of the future will join the profession with the skills and knowledge they will need in the future – what do you think?

Find out more about suggested changes to education, and share your views through their website before 12 September.

Over the summer, they will be out and about to hear your views in more detail, as well as hosting Twitter chats about proposed changes.

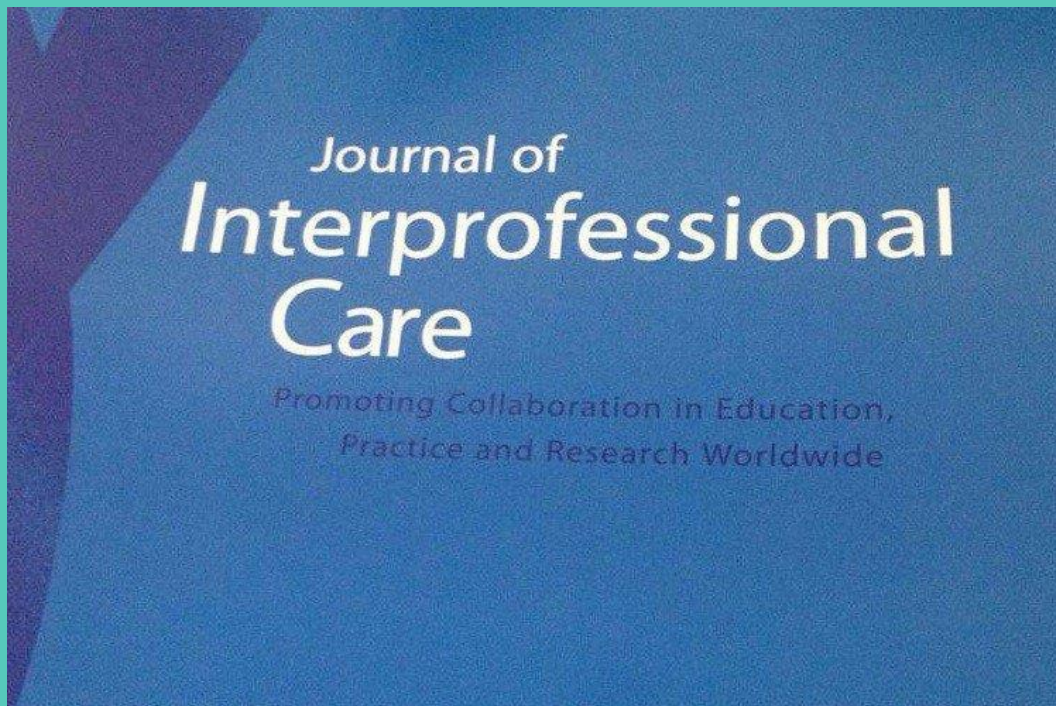

HCPC releases revised Standards of education and training and guidance

The Health and Care Professions Council (HCPC) has today released revised Standards of education and training \(SETs\) and guidance. which now contain an explicit requirement that courses include interprofessional education. CAIPE was in contact with the team which conducted the review for the HCPC prior to these changes and sent feedback during the consultation process for this new standard.

The SETs are the standards against which we assess education and training programmes. A programme which meets the SETs allows learners who successfully complete that programme to meet the standards of proficiency for their profession, and are eligible to apply to the HCPC for registration.

Free Webinar on the upcoming 2017–18 National Center Education and Training Programme – 12th July 2017

The National Center will be offering a variety of training and technical assistance options throughout the year including conferences, webinars and face-to-face workshops. The goal is to support the unique needs of our stakeholders across practice and education and directly address the topics and questions most frequently raised across the field including measurement and evaluation, interprofessional care coordination, team optimization, developing the practice–education Nexus, overcoming barriers to successful IPE implementation, interprofessional informatics, and emerging trends and research in the field.

In this 1–hour webinar, we'll highlight the various training programs and opportunities, including target audiences, key objectives and what individuals or teams can expect as part of the learning experience. After this webinar you will have a clear understanding of the best options to consider for your team, allowing you to plan your training and development for the upcoming year.

1st Symposium for Interprofessional Education in Africa

The Africa Interprofessional Education Network (AfrIPEN) and the University of Namibia invite you to the First Symposium for Interprofessional Education in Africa.

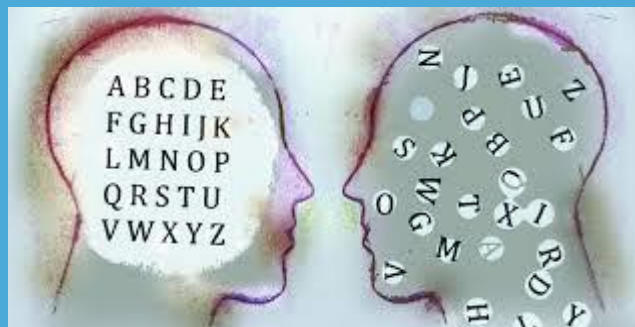

This symposium follows the establishment of AfrIPEN in 2015 and the Network's first strategic planning workshop in 2016.

AfrIPEN's aim is to establish interprofessional education and collaborative practice (IPE) as integral part in training the health workforce and in the effective functioning of systems for health in Sub-Saharan Africa by advocating for, collaborating on, promoting and sharing good practice of IPE.

Collaboration and participation from all stakeholders are important. All participants are expected to share their experiences (whether they present an abstract or not) and learn from each other. This will not be a symposium where you can just sit back and listen. Participation is required! Accepted presentations will be posted on the www.afripen.org website.

How Pharmacists Can Team Up with Physicians to Improve Care

Increased collaboration with physicians means better health outcomes, but what does that look like in the real world?

APhA and the CDC recently teamed up to create a guide for pharmacists and physicians in the U.S. on how to work together to achieve greater health outcomes. The guide describes “community-clinical linkages,” which are connections among the community, clinics, and other settings “where primary care is provided to improve population health.”

Opportunities

Call for hosting the ATBH Conference in 2020

The World Coordinating Committee ATBH warmly welcomes expressions of interest from universities and health service organisations in hosting the tenth ATBH conference to be held in 2020. First held in London in 1997, ATBH conferences have met in Vancouver, London, Stockholm, Sydney, Kobe, Pittsburgh, and Oxford with Auckland to follow in 2018. The conferences bring together up to 900 delegates from around the world to promote interprofessional education towards improving global health through closer collaboration. Delegates include health and social care professionals and educators, policy makers, students and service users and carers.

Interested organisations should be an institution active in the domain of health and/or social care, or of higher education in this domain, or a regional network in IPE/CP, or a consortium of institutions be willing to work closely with a regional network represented on the World Coordinating Committee. The need to be prepared to carry full financial liability for the conference, and organize the conference according to the general guidelines and the general program schedule, over 3 days in the period to define between May and October 2020 and to be agreed with the WCC–ATBH. They need to provide an easily accessible venue for international participation with evidence of available accommodation for a minimum of 500 delegates over 3 days in the conference venue. Preferably they have a track record in interprofessional education and collaborative practice nationally and internationally. Candidates provide written support from senior managers of the organisation/s involved in the bid, and provide evidence of available accommodation for lodging of conference participants in the area around the conference venue. Expressions of interest should indicate that these criteria are met. Candidates can contact WCC members and administrators for additional information. Click here for further info.

Success of CAIPE's first Twitter Chat

#CAIPEchat #CAIPEstudents

The CAIPE student Committee organised CAIPE's first ever Twitter Chat on 29th June on the topic, "what makes an interprofessional team work well?" Thank you to everyone who took part especially Stephen Garvey, one of our twitter experts, who hosted the chat. Approximately 20 people, mainly students and service users from at least 3 countries took part or observed. There were around 150 tweets, 40 replies, 32 retweets and 12 click links during the hour. The quality of the contributions was excellent, at times tweets were coming in so fast it was hard to keep up.

The Student Committee will now run chats regularly. The next one will be on Thursday 24th August 19.00 to 20.00 BST. Please contact us with any suggestions for the topic. Look out for the pre chat blog and advice on how to take part on the CAIPE events calendar, in the newsletter and on twitter and facebook.
