Year 2 students Travis Norton & Bethanie Howard from University of Birmingham give us their review of the annual Scottish Clinical Skills Network Conference at St Andrews University in May.

We are two second year adult nursing students from the University of Birmingham that were fortunate enough to be awarded bursaries to attend the annual Scottish Clinical Skills Network Conference at St Andrews University in May.

We got to experience clinical skills that we haven't had the chance to before, such as performing a cardiac ultrasound on a volunteer and interacting with the simulation apparatus that the exhibitors had brought to the conference.

Interprofessional Student Learning Conference at the University of East Anglia

The Centre for Interprofessional Practice (CIPP) at the University of East Anglia recently held their 11th Interprofessional Student Learning Conference. This year with the theme: "Modern Family – adapted – Health and social care in the 21st Century"

21st century families take many forms; people live multiple social and cultural contexts that affect their responses to health and social care, and their engagement with it. The conference adapted this concept, using diverse families as the backdrop for exploring interprofessional practice from early to later life taking into consideration also challenging contexts – including social disadvantage. Students were offered an interactive experience, where they could learn and work together with local professionals and people from the community.

The conference kicked off with Professor Peter Beresford OBE given a very thought provoking keynote presentation. Students then joined one out of five workshops entitled:

- From the pond to the sea: young people transitioning to adult services.
- Mental and physical health.
- Self-management: empowering, or passing the buck?
- Women across Boundaries: challenges facing women around the world.
- The ageing population.

The feedback was very good from all participants (n~200) giving the overall experience a score of 4.5 (out of 5). An IPL intervention well worth the investment.

EIPEN scholarships

We are delighted to announce the two winners of CAIPE bursaries to attend the EIPEN conference in September.

Undergraduate medical student Gurdas Singh, from Kings College, London will present a paper entitled, How can effective interprofessional team-working reduce medication errors?

PhD student Michael Palapal Sy, Occupational Therapist, From Filipino (Philippines) University and Tokyo Metropolitan University will present a paper entitled The relevance of interprofessional collaboration in substance use and addiction settings in the Philippines: A workshop using the Kawakita Jiro Method.

Self-harm is often used as a coping mechanism. The physical pain of self-harm might feel easier to deal with than the emotional pain that's behind it. Over half of people who die by suicide have a history of self-harm. However, the intention is more often to punish themselves, express their distress or relieve unbearable tension. Sometimes the reason is a mixture of both. This half day workshop will give an overview of the field, known research, NICE guidance etc. and self-harm from a school's perspective.

We are honoured to have speaker Sheena Ashford is a Chartered Educational Psychologist registered with the British Psychological Society and the Health Professions Council and an accredited member of the Division of Health Psychology. Additionally it is a delight to welcome Pete Maguire is a Consultant Clinical Psychologist, Educational Psychologist and Teacher with extensive experience in Local Authority and NHS services for children and young persons.

Demand for tickets is very high and there are a limited numbers left sobook now to avoid disappointment.

1st Symposium for Interprofessional Education in Africa

The Africa Interprofessional Education Network (AfrIPEN) and the University of Namibia invite you to the First Symposium for Interprofessional Education in Africa.

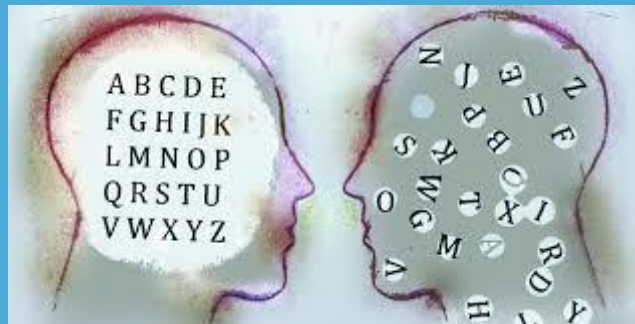

This symposium follows the establishment of AfrIPEN in 2015 and the Network's first strategic planning workshop in 2016.

AfrIPEN's aim is to establish interprofessional education and collaborative practice (IPE) as integral part in training the health workforce and in the effective functioning of systems for health in Sub-Saharan Africa by advocating for, collaborating on, promoting and sharing good practice of IPE.

Collaboration and participation from all stakeholders are important. All participants are expected to share their experiences (whether they present an abstract or not) and learn from each other. This will not be a symposium where you can just sit back and listen. Participation is required! Accepted presentations will be posted on the www.afripen.org website.

How new simulation technologies will change practice

The next few years will see a revolution in the way healthcare professionals are trained and their competency assessed. New technologies such as virtual and augmented reality, use of smartphones, remote learning and the increase in use of all forms of simulated practice will enable more engaging and efficient learning programmes to be developed.

This article explores the potential new world of simulated practice and assessment and reviews the ASPiH Annual conference programme 2017.

Tackling Inequalities Through Health and Social Care Design

A free online course for anyone interested in finding out what health inequalities are, and how practitioners, managers, policymakers and the public can work together to help reduce them. The course starts on the 29th of May and offers 12 hours of learning over 4 weeks – register now!

This enjoyable and informative professional development opportunity will enable learners to develop their knowledge of inequalities, learning from initiatives in Scotland and overseas that are working to reduce them via health and social care.

We'll look at different approaches to improving health and social outcomes across Scotland for a wide range of groups including vulnerable pregnant women, children, young offenders and GP patients in some of the most deprived communities in the country.

The course covers topics including-

- The social determinants of health
- Hidden health inequalities
- Technology & access to care
- Planning and designing an improvement project
- Ethnic, cultural and gender differences in health outcomes
- Nutrition & diet in early years
- Interdisciplinary approaches to improvement
- Criminal justice and health outcomes
- Lifestyle factors

- Designing services for vulnerable groups
- Addressing patient well-being via co-located services

Join learners from around the world to explore this critical topic. Together, we can build awareness and encourage positive change using quality improvement approaches to support our work.

This course is a continued professional development (CPD) opportunity for staff and students. Enrol in the course yourself or share the course details with staff, colleagues and students, encouraging them to join in as part of their CPD this year.

If you have questions about the course, or if you'd like to set up a cohort of learners within your organisation, please get in touch or connect with them on Facebook and Twitter.
