A message from the Chair

Dear CAIPE Member

Welcome to the May E-newsletter.

As the summer begins it heralds a major event in the CAIPE calendar. Our AGM will take place on Thursday 13th June 2019 at Friends House, Euston, London. This year we are also combining The John Horder Award where the winners of the team and student awards will be announced.

Further details and booking details are noted in this newsletter and we hope you will be able to join us.

Please do send us details of your work and events for inclusion in future newsletters. We would like to share your good work and success with everyone. We can also publicise events for you.

Best

Richard Pitt

HEALTH BULLETIN, 17 MAY 2019

Have your say: Help shape the future Nursing and Midwifery Council

We know that health and social care is continuously changing and that as one of the largest professional regulators, we need to keep pace.

You may have seen already that we are developing our new strategy for 2020-2025 to make sure we are fit for the future. Just like any other part of the health and social care system we recognise we should not operate in isolation.

Over the next 12 months we want to work with as many people as possible to make sure our strategy meets the needs and expectations of the public and the professionals on our register, as well as aligning with the work of our partners.

We would really welcome your input and insight. We have launched the first stage of our development process and would like to hear from you about the issues you think will have the greatest impact on health and social care over the next five years, and what we, as an organisation, should be focusing on during this time.

Sharing your thoughts with us is easy, just complete our online survey by visiting our website. You can also join the conversation on Twitter using

#FutureNMC.

TELL US YOUR VIEWS

The information we gather during this period will help develop our key strategic themes. These will then be published for consultation at the end of July. Working together doesn't stop there though; we will continue to work with you and our many other partners to co-produce what we hope to be a bold, far-reaching strategy for the future which will help address the issues affecting nursing, midwifery and health and social care from 2020 and beyond.

Thank you in advance for taking the time to get involved and share your thoughts.

Yours sincerely,

Nicosia 2019

We're looking forward to welcoming members and friends in Cyprus for the 2nd International Congress of Health Workforce Education and Research. The event will take place at the European University Cyprus in Nicosia on Thursday 9th May 2019 and Friday 10th May 2019. We have a fantastic Congress Programme with multiple sessions, panels and workshops. We would like to thank our Host and all other Partners and Sponsors for their support in delivering what will surely be a great event!

Here at INHWE we are constantly trying to innovate and that is why for #INHWENicosia2019 we are trying to engage members who cannot make it to Cyprus. We have asked presenters to share their slides in advance of the congress and these will be posted to our website at the start of each session. Members will be able to read, comment and join in the discussion of each session by using the Discussion Forum section of the website. Session facilitators and delegates have been asked to engage with the platform to enhance the spread of cutting edge research throughout our membership and in line with the overall aim of our network.

Nobody Left Outside Community

Dr Sharyn Maxwell, INHWE Working Group Lead for Caring for Vulnerable People, attended the first Nobody Left Outside (NLO) community webinar as part of its Thematic Network work within the EU Health Policy Platform. Read more.

WHO Paper: Gender Equity in the Health Workforce

The World Health Organisation has recently published a working paper entitled 'Gender equity in the health workforce: Analysis of 104 countries' which finds that there is an average gender pay gap of around 28% which exists in the health workforce. Once occupation and working hours are accounted for, the gender pay gap is 11%. Read more.

INHWE Working Groups

We're making some exciting changes to our Working Groups to make it easier for members to join and get involved. We'll be announcing these changes via our newsletter and twitter account later this week. Find out about our working groups by clicking here.

Working Groups Update

We've made some changes to our Working Groups (WGs) to make it easier for you to join and get involved. We listened to feedback from you, our members, and we'll be replacing the social network and using the discussion forums instead. This keeps everything within the INHWE website, meaning you only need one password for all our services. In order to register for a WG just click on each of the groups below you'd like to join below and add yourself to the mailing list and we'll do the rest! To get involved with a particular working group, share your research or canvas the opinions of other members, just post a message on the dedicated Discussion Forum.

Our WGs provide opportunities for educators, practitioners, researchers and policy makers within our membership to connect and advance their focused area of practice and research. WGs focus on topics that are important to health workforce education and focus on some of the more complex, cross cutting issues related to education and training. Each group aims to benefit a multi-stakeholder and inter-disciplinary audience and are accessible to all our members. The WGs aim to:

- encourage advances in specialist areas of practice;
- enable global networks;
- enhance knowledge sharing;
- support research development;
- raise exposure of topic on the policy agenda.

IFIC Canada launches first North American Virtual Community for Integrated Care

Throughout North America, there are many challenges and disruptions occurring across the health system. IFIC Canada, the North American Centre for Integrated Care has been established to create a platform to improve the capacity of individuals and organizations in advancing integrated care. IFIC Canada will focus on the principle of people-centred, co-designed care and to achieve our goal of progressing integrated care throughout North America, we are creating a virtual community to bring together all those involved in Integrated Care.

The first meeting of the IFIC Canada Virtual Community will take place on Tuesday, 14 May at 12pm EST. These online meetings will bring together people who want to make positive change within health and social care in Canada and the wider North America region.

The virtual community is convened by the International Foundation for Integrated Care (IFIC), The Change Foundation and the Institute of Health, Policy Management and Evaluation (IHPME) from the University of Toronto.

This will be the first session of a monthly series hosted by IFIC Canada bringing people together from across North America who are interested in advancing integrated care. Together, we will learn from innovative integrated care practices around the world – and from each others’ experiences - so that we can facilitate integrated care and create positive change in North America. We will also look to the community to guide the focus for future webinars of the virtual network.

The inaugural convening of the IFIC Canada virtual community will take a tour of integrated care around the world through the eyes of Dr Nick Goodwin, CEO of IFIC. Also joining us for the first webinar will be Dr. Walter Wodchis and Dr. Ross Baker from IHPME, with the session being facilitated by The Change Foundation’s Jodeme Goldhar.

Carole Ann Alloway, Caregiver talks about the importance of co-design

In her blog Carol Ann Alloway talks about her experience of presenting at the 18th International Conference on Integrated Care which took place in Utrecht in 2018 and looks forward to the coming of NACIC 2020 to Toronto and her involvement in the planning the committee.

In February of 2018 I got an email from Jodeme Goldhar, Executive Lead – Strategy and Innovation at The Change Foundation asking if I would be interested in speaking with her at a keynote address of ICIC18 in Utrecht, the Netherlands. So many emotions and questions went through my mind as I read and then re-read her email. Excitement, honour, fear and then excitement again! I jumped in with both feet because I trust Jodeme and The Change Foundation. We have the same values and we want to make caregivers' lives better.

I am a caregiver for my husband who was only supposed to have one operation but had 10 over 7 years and also developed heart and gastro issues. Exhausted, isolated, frustrated and alone were my emotions then, although I hid them behind a cheery smile and a 'can do' attitude. I was angry when I was diagnosed with depression because I felt I was a strong person. I thought, 'how/why did this happen?'. So, I wrote a Caregiver Wishlist and shared it with Cathy Fooks, President and CEO of The Change Foundation. They invited other caregivers to contribute to the Wishlist and developed a video which has sparked more Caregiver Wishlists and videos.

But back to Utrecht. When I met with Jodeme, I had many questions – what message did we want to send? How would the talk be structured? What part would I play? Jodeme's answer was – 'let's co-design the talk together'.

Imagine that! [Read more ... ]

Carole Ann Alloway is a retired Human Resources Manager, mother of four and grandmother of seven. Carole Ann became a full-time caregiver for her husband, Bill, who had ten difficult operations within a 7-year period. In addition, Bill's gastro issues worsened, and he developed congestive heart failure. She has witnessed first-hand the gaps in the health care and home care systems. Together with Sara Shearkhani, another caregiver, they have co-founded Family Caregivers Voice.

Canada make a growing contribution to the global movement for change

In his blog, Walter Wodchis reflects on Canada's involvement in the 19th International Conference on Integrated Care and the opportunity to learn from other countries, but also the platform presented for sharing Canada's growing experience in designing and delivering integrated care.

The ICIC19 conference in Donostia-San Sebastian was a wonderful opportunity for Canadians to learn who in Canada is working to better understand, improve and advance integrated care. This year's conference was attended by the largest number of Canadian delegates to date with more than 40 participants, many of whom gathered for an early breakfast on the final day of the conference hosted by the Health Standards Organization. Everyone was highly engaged and involved throughout the conference: Canadian contributions included a keynote talk by Dr. Henry Mintzberg, 22 oral presentations, 12 poster presentations, 11 session chairs and 6 workshops involving 19 presenters (clearly some people had multiple contributions). Dr. Jacobi Elliott was awarded Best Poster of the Conference (having already won the Best Poster award in 2016 in Barcelona and Runner-

Up Poster in 2014 in Sydney). More than that though, the Early Researchers in Integrated Care is an international group led by Mudi Kadu, a PhD student at the University of Toronto, and three other Special Interest Groups are facilitated or co-facilitated by Canadians including Digital Health Enabling Integrated Care, Volunteers and Voluntary Sector, and Advanced Education in Integrated Care. Canada is clearly on the map of integrated care. [Read more ...]

Dr. Walter P Wodchis is an Associate Professor at the University of Toronto, and Scientist at both the Institute for Clinical Sciences and Toronto Rehabilitation Research Institute. His main research interests are health economics and financing, and health care policy evaluation. ### Winner of Integrated Care Award, Jacobi Elliott on her ICIC experience

In her blog, Jacobi Elliot writes of her experience of attending IFIC

International and World Conferences and how they have contributed to her learning experience and knowledge development in her work towards her PhD and career development. Jacobi is winner of no less than three Integrated Care Awards.

In April 2019, I had the privilege of attending my 6th International Conference on Integrated Care (ICIC), the annual conference hosted by the International Foundation for Integrated Care (IFIC). This is a must-attend conference for anyone interested in, or working in, areas related to integrating health and social care. After attending my first conference in 2014, I instantly knew that I had found the conference that I was meant to be at – a conference that aligned with my research interests, brought experts together from around the world, and highlighted the importance of working together with patients, families and health care providers.

As an early-career researcher, IFIC has provided me with tools, resources and a community of people to help advance my knowledge in integrated care. Every year I meet new people and learn new information to apply to my work in Canada. The conference provides me with an opportunity to share my research, gain knowledge and network with experts from around the world.

This year, the conference had over 1300 delegates from 60 different countries, what an incredible opportunity to learn from others who are doing things differently!. [Read more ...]

Leading the global
movement for change

Integrated Care brings Value to People and Communities

A year ago, at ICIC18 in Utrecht, IFIC, our Foundation came to age. It was a moment of celebration for us all that was also reflected in the success of the event. In the days that followed I remember getting messages of appreciation and gratitude from individual delegates and institutions that attended the conference. Among all these messages, a couple of themes strongly emerged: It was worth investing in integrated care because it brings value to people and communities; and, the importance of understanding what matters to patients and communities as key guiding principle for our work.

These two themes resonated again in Donostia-San Sebastian during this year's conference. Across remarkable plenaries, great parallel sessions and workshops, delegates had the opportunity to participate in sound debates, know about innovative approaches and learn from those leading the needed change. A terrific buzz and energetic atmosphere filled the venue during the three days the conference lasted. It was, again, a remarkable success that translated in a new record in the number of delegates.

This year, words and messages of gratitude came when many of us were still at the venue. As in previous editions, this was the result of the tireless dedication and work of a team of people in collaboration with IFIC staff. I want to extend my special thanks and congratulations to all of them. In particular to the great support of our local hosts to whom I would like to express my admiration and gratefulness: Osakidetza, Bioef, Osasun Saila (Department of Health, Basque Country), Gipuzkoako Foru Aldundia (Gipuzkoa Provincial Council) and the City Council of Donostia-San Sebastian.

In moving forward, IFIC has the aspiration to be even closer to our community of participants so that our mission of becoming a leading international voice and inspire, influence and facilitate adoption of integrated care can be fully realised. Our community of participants are not only the beneficiaries of all our efforts but also main contributors in leading this movement for change.

I can't wait to join them all again at ICIC20 in Šibenik!

We hope you enjoy this post conference report. Here you will find video highlights, presentations and post conference blogs from some of the key people involved in delivering the conference. We take this opportunity to thank all the team for their hard work and a special thank you to our hosts OSAKIDETZA – Basque Health Service, Bioef, Ministry for Health of the Basque Government the City Council of Donostia-San Sebastian and the Provincial Council of Gipuzkoa.

Eskerrik asko! Gero arte!

Conference Highlights

Watch a summary of the conference featuring interviews with keynote speakers, delegates and partners.

Social injustice is killing on a large scale

With a record number of abstracts received for ICIC19, the conference featured over 350 presentations across a range of plenary sessions and breakouts, 125 workshop and Special Interest Group Meetings, 450 posters on display, and once again the Innovation Zone on Wednesday afternoon featured 12 experiential workshops, and the opportunity to visit a range of local health and social care service sites.

Conference highlights included a presentation on Day 2 from Michael Marmot on the social determinants of health. Micheal warned of the crisis in life expectancy and that after a dramatic increase, many western countries have flat lined or are in decline. To avert this crisis, we need to look to the social determinants of health and understand why people are turning to drug use or other unhealthy habits, are committing suicide, and are generally living less well. He pointed to Costa Rica and Cuba who have longer life expedienicies, with considerably less money. The social conditions for the poorest are now better in Costa Rica and Cuba than in the US. You can view Michael's full presentation here.

Later in that same session Maria Angeles Duran asked what do we mean by care giving, and if it only involved paid care? We have not clearly defined the concept. How can we socially recognise caregivers (women)? When they get old, who will care for them, and why are we not paying them for their efforts? She noted that men die rich because they sell their time for money. But women work for free. Watch Maria's thought provoking presentation here (en español)

In Plenary 3 Henry Mintzberg told Viktoria Stein that we need to move from evidence to experience. Measuring can destroy care, and you simply cannot measure everything. But you don't measure learning. He said we must be careful not to let measurements control us. He said that there was too much categorization, commodification and calculation and considered the effect this has on the quality of services? The three Cs need to be recognized for how they hinder as well as help the practices of health care. He reminded us that management and leadership is intertwined, a leader must manage, and a manager must lead. Mintzberg declared that 'Healthcare is not a business!'. To hear more about Mintzberg's insights into the leadership and management of health services you can watch the full interview here.

More Plenary Highlights

IFIC, two decades bringing about transformational change for people and their health and wellbeing

Dr Toni Dedeu joined IFIC in October 2018 as Director of Programmes, but has had a long relationship with the Foundation spanning two decades, and has been a key player in the integrated care movement internationally. Here, as he takes over the baton at IFIC, Toni reflects on the Foundation's journey and the progress made in the 'Movement for Change' as we move into our third decade.

"The 19th International Conference on Integrated Care (ICIC) bears the imprint of two decades of transformational change in health and social care provision. The evolution of care service delivery has gravitated from supply to demand. This is reflected in the evolution of the key topics discussed in ICIC conferences and is echoed in the cultural changes that have taken place behind the scenes. This latest conference reflects this sea change: its driving message was that of engaging and empowering people and communities to become equal partners in care. In the conference people were able to discuss and share knowledge, not merely from the theoretical perspective but also providing evidence of implementation and evaluation of person and population centred care. Not many conferences bring together topics such as the role of carers and pharmacy offices in the community, inviting such a wide range of professionals from a large number of sectors to the debate.

The seven thematic areas enabled the delegates to design their own journeys. Participants started arriving early in the morning and when sessions began the rooms were brim-full of lively participants in search of new knowledge on topics such as: codesign and coproduction in care; social design; innovative strategies to activate the community; managing beliefs, expectations and priorities; reassessing health promotion, disease prevention and community health, and finally, models of care for people. They were also eager to learn more on the latest initiatives to improve care of vulnerable populations and populations at risk and co-participating in defining measures and outcomes that matter to people or learning about the impact of technology-enabled care. The bulk of the information was shared in the plenary sessions, interactive workshops, oral presentations, the innovation zone experiences and debates, and the poster sessions, all of which will widen the knowledge tree of IFIC and are an extremely useful resource for the integrated care community, policy makers, managers, researchers, patients and professionals.

Almost two decades ago, visionaries and pioneers such as Guss Schirvers and thorough and passionate researchers such as Nick Goodwin, laid the foundations of Integrated Care and the current 'Movement for Change'. Their achievement resulted in a network of more than 20,000 participants around the world, and at present the movement is heading towards a new phase. Integrated care is finally in the policy makers' agendas ...

Behind the scenes of organising ICIC19

Bringing a conference to a region is no small undertaking, in particular when so many countries and disciplines are represented at one conference. San Sebastian welcomed over 1,300 delegates representing 60 different countries, and multiple professions for the 19th International Conference on Integrated Care (ICIC19). They were received by our gracious hosts OSAKIDETZA – Basque Health Service, Bioef, the Ministry for Health of the Basque Government, the City Council of Donostia-San Sebastian and the Provincial Council of Gipuzkoa. Here in his post conference blog, Koldo Piñera Elorriaga, Senior Technician at BIOEF, talks about the experience of bringing the conference to the Basque region.

"Seeing the San Sebastián Kursaal Congress Centre brimming with over 1,300 colleagues interested in integrated care, a record to date at ICIC conferences, was a great pleasure for everyone who has been involved in organising ICIC19 to a greater or less extent, particularly after a year of intense work.

This all began in May 2016 when a team from IFIC accompanied a group from the United Kingdom and New Zealand on a study visit to the Basque Country. Three days of meetings, presentations and visits reflected the interest generated by progress in care integration in the Basque Health Service (Osakidetza). We saw the IFIC's work first-hand and, for the last few years, we had been attending a variety of conferences such as in Edinburgh and Mexico in 2015. In a joint reflection with the Ministry for Health of the Basque Government, we came up with the idea that there might be an excellent opportunity to host an edition of ICIC in the Basque Country and share the Basque integration experience with the rest of the world alongside the latest progress in the field. So we suggested it to Nick Goodwin and his team.

After acceptance from IFIC in Dublin 2017, we gradually got down to work. [Read more .....]"

Capacity building and technical support for implementing Integrated Care in Europe

The European Commission, Directorate-General Health and Food Safety, in collaboration with the International Foundation for Integrated Care (IFIC), organised a workshop and a marketplace on “capacity building and technical support for implementing integrated care”.

The aim of these events was to bring together the “demand” and “supply” sides, i.e. respectively the authorities responsible for organisation of health care systems and organisations/experts capable to provide knowledge and expertise on how to implement integrated care. During the events, the two sides had the opportunity to talk to each other and consider potential co-operation on transforming health systems. The workshop took place on 1st April. It started with presentations on EU level actions and instruments to help build capacity and mobilise financing for the implementation of integrated care, including the type of technical assistance provided by the European Commission’s Structural Reforms Support Service. There were also presentations of three EU projects: SCIROCCO Exchange and VIGOUR (funded by the EU Health Programme) and DigitalHealthEurope (funded by Horizon 2020). Twinning activities and knowledge exchanges between early adopters (authorities with greater experience in integration of care) and the next adopters (less experienced ones) are part of these projects. 'Movement for Change' enters new phase of expansion

"There is so much more to learn, to explore, to research, and to observe before we begin to fully understand 'what works' and how and whether integrated care can be implemented successfully" says outgoing IFIC CEO, Dr Nick Goodwin. Here Nick looks to the future expansion of the 'Movement for Change', as he takes on a new role as Professor and Director of the Central Coast Research Institute in Australia, while continuing to lead IFIC's expansion in the Asia-Pacific region.

"The 1300 persons present in San Sebastian are for the most part 'converts' to integrated care and, as innovators themselves, feel very much at home with like-minded colleagues seeking to find positive reinforcement of their interests. This is one reason why the 'feel' of ICIC conferences is often like no other – we are not alone, our conversations are mutually enhancing, our core ideas are shared. Yet, we are still at the beginning of the integrated care movement. There is so much more to learn, to explore, to research, and to observe before we begin to fully understand 'what works' and how and whether integrated care can be implemented successfully, to scale appropriately, and to have a lasting impact on improving the health and wellbeing of people – especially the most vulnerable in our societies who would benefit the most from better care coordination but today are the least likely to receive it.

This represents a new challenge for IFIC which is why it has changed its statutes to go beyond an organization that seeks to bring people together to advance the science, knowledge and adoption of integrated care in policy and practice. Today, IFIC stands as a movement for change with a vision in which all individuals, families and communities should be engaged and empowered to maximise their health and wellbeing through person-centred integrated care. Whilst maintaining a critical eye on whether integrated care is able to achieve its promise, IFIC in the future will seek to advocate and to influence the debate more directly than before – so building on its core strengths and academic credibility to speak to a future where integrated working should become the norm and not confined to special projects running on the sidelines.

IFIC's growing network, now nearly 20,000 individuals strong, will be supported in the future through the development of regional hubs and collaborative centres – such as those already running vibrantly in Australia, Canada, Scotland and Ireland. The 'hub' concept seeks to help grow awareness of IFIC's activities and to co-create work together with local partners that support and fund its work, build its network, grow capacity and capabilities, and to support knowledge sharing. Global cross-pollination of ideas to solve local problems

"Have you ever tried to cook something outside of the dish's country of origin? It tastes different. No matter how thoroughly you read and follow a recipe. It still tastes different. The soil, the air, the water, in essence, the elements that affect the ingredients are different. Therefore, the result is different too. Not better or worse, but not the same."

Dr Edelweiss Aldasoro joined IFIC in 2018 as a Senior Fellow and works on a range of education and communication projects including three European research projects; EURIPHI, VIGOUR and Digital Health Europe. She is a qualified medical doctor and prior to joining IFIC specialised in General Internal Medicine and Infectious Diseases in Osakidetza in the Basque region. It was therefore a special conference for Edelweiss as she returned as an international researcher to her home town. Here in her blog, Edelweiss reflects on the what bringing an international conference to a country means for the local context and talks about the post conference study tour visiting several health and social care sites in the region.

"...the journey started on Tuesday, the second day of the conference, with delegates from Wales sharing some of their experiences in a room full of people even though it was very early in the morning. We learned how the Bevan Commission supported innovative initiatives to adapt the traditional way of working in Wales. Some examples included the role adaptation of workers in a Primary Health Care centre to solve staff shortage, projects to identify workforce crisis and create support and coaching strategies to help local students, the transformation of midwifery services to adapt to rural context, app development to diagnose dementia or interventions for children at risk of early language and behaviour difficulties. The audience was challenged to think out of the box, rebalance power in the system, recognise shared responsibility of the society in the population well-being and think on the concept of prudent healthcare. To sum up, to think different. "We have to change the way we think to change practice" and "if we keep doing the same things, we will get the same results", we heard.

After the conference we visited the the Hospital of Mendaro, part of the Integrated Health Organisation of Debarrena (Gipuzkoa) and the Primary Health Care Centre of Zabalgana in Vitoria-Gasteiz (Araba). They were two fascinating examples of adaptation to local population characteristics and demands, from rural to urban, older and younger populations, prevalence of chronic or acute diseases. Spotlight on Learning from International Experiences in Funding and Financing Workshop

This round-table brought together a panel of experts on the funding and financing of integrated care. The focus of the roundtable was to debate the issues in how best incentivise integrated service provision, specifically as it pertains to people with vulnerable needs. The round-table was supported by the European Commission Structural Reform Support Service.

This interactive and informative session was chaired by Andrew Terris, Senior Associate, IFIC and Hali Tarum, Head of Social Welfare Department, Ministry of Social Affairs, Estonia who asked three questions: How to find the right balance between flexibility / local empowerment, specifically when defining a care coordination model? How can financing and incentive models help use flexible models more effectively?;

What have been the international lessons learned from joint-commissioning solutions? What is the optimal number of stakeholders that should be included in the contract? and; How to best introduce performance elements in coordination model?

The panel made up of international experts, including:

- Ellen Nolte, London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, UK
- Andrew Smith, COBIC/ Optimedis
- Jeroen Struijs, RIVM, Netherlands
- Ri de Ridder, Belgium
- Stephen Shortell, Berkeley, USA

In her summary blog, Nieves highlights key points against the three questions voiced by each of the panellists. [Read more...]

Congratulations to the Integrated Care Award Winners

The IFIC Integrated Care Awards are selected based on quality of content, originality and quality of presentation. The awards are supported by the Foundation and are in recognition of the advancement of the science, knowledge and adoption of integrated care policy and practice.

The winner of the Integrated Care Award for Best Paper was Alison Bunce from Compassionate Inverclyde in Scotland for Paper 351

“Compassionate, helpful, neighbourly – a connected community that cares”. Compassionate Inverclyde is a growing, dynamic, and self-organising social movement of compassionate citizens who care for each other: fundraisers, volunteers, befrienders, 'no one dies alone' companions, community cafes, schools, businesses and neighbourhoods. Compassionate Inverclyde has built community resilience through neighbourhood networks and relationships with people who care and can help, enabling and equipping compassionate citizens to offer support at times of crisis. People facing bereavement, loneliness, and survivorship access compassionate support that improves wellbeing, irrespective of age, condition or socio-economic background. You can download the presentation here.

The runner up prize for best paper went to Sarah Derrett from University of Otago in New Zealand for Paper 588 “Health systems and genuine engagement: experiences and outcomes of a New Zealand Community Health Council”. The Community Health Council was established to enhance community, whānau (Māori word for family), and patient experiences; improve service integration; promote equity and; ensure services are organized, and provided, to better address people's needs. You can download her presentation here.

Winner of Best Poster (for the second time!) was Dr Jacobi Elliott, from the University of Waterloo in Canada for Paper ID 536 “Implementing a new model in primary care for older Canadians living with frailty”. This poster submission was upgraded to an Oral Paper at the conference. Jacobi presented her research on a national project funded by the Canadian Frailty Network, led by Dr. Paul Stolee from the University of Waterloo. You can download her presentation here.

Spotlight on The OMIS Room: Experiences of End of Life Integrated Care

The OMIS Room at ICIC19 focused on innovations in integrated care particularly focusing on innovations from Spain and in the field of palliative and end of life care in association with IFIC Scotland and the Palliative and End of Life Care SIG.

"Christina Castillo-Rodriguez of the New Health Foundation chaired this fascinating session on approaches to care for people at the end of their lives in a more compassionate, integrated and person driven way.

The first presentation was from Dr Arturo Alvarez-Rosete, from the New Health Foundation who are the organisers of The OMIS Room. The New Health Foundation is a non-for-profit institution with the aim of addressing the quality of life of people with advanced diseases, high dependency and at the end-of-life. Dr Alvarez-Rosete described the NewPalex method, a systematic working approach for the development, management and leadership of Palliative Care programmes and resources. Organisations can obtain NewPalex certification through complying with a set of standards within the organization, compiled by a consensus of experts and based on internationally recognized standards. He described how this was implemented in Colombia – an article on this will be published in June in the Journal for Palliative Care. [Read more ...]"

Canada make a growing contribution to the global movement for change

The 1st North American Conference on Integrated Care in association with the 6th World Congress on Integrated Care will take place in Toronto, Canada, from 5 – 7 October 2020 . With the overarching theme 'Co-designing for health and wellbeing with individuals and communities', the conference is a partnership of University of Toronto, KPMG Canada, The Change Foundation, HSPRN and iCOACH. The conference will bring together researchers, clinicians and managers from around the world who are engaged in the design and delivery of integrated health and social care. Here Walter Wodchis from the University of Toronto reflects on Canada's contribution to the 'Movement for Change' and looks towards Toronto 2020 and the launch of IFIC Canada, the North American Centre for Integrated Care.

"The ICIC 2019 conference in Donostia-San Sebastian was a wonderful opportunity for Canadians to learn who in Canada is working to better understand, improve and advance integrated care. This year's conference was attended by the largest number of Canadian delegates to date with more than 40 participants, many of whom gathered for an early breakfast on the final day of the conference hosted by the Health Standards Organization. Everyone was highly engaged and involved throughout the conference: Canadian contributions included a keynote talk by Dr. Henry Mintzberg, 22 oral presentations, 12 poster presentations, 11 session chairs and 6 workshops involving 19 presenters (clearly some people had multiple contributions). Dr. Jacobi Elliott was awarded Best Poster of the Conference (having already won the Best Poster award in 2016 in Barcelona and Runner-Up Poster in 2014 in Sydney). More than that though, the Early Researchers in Integrated Care is an international group led by Mudi Kadu, a PhD student at the University of Toronto, and three other Special Interest Groups are facilitated or co-facilitated by Canadians including Digital Health Enabling Integrated Care, Volunteers and Voluntary Sector, and Advanced Education in Integrated Care. Canada is clearly on the map of integrated care." [Read more...]

APIC2 Call for Papers

With the overarching theme 'Achieving better value for people and populations' the APIC2 conference is a partnership of The University of Newcastle, Centre for Rural & Remote Mental Health, Children's Health Queensland, Central Coast Local Health District, The Australian Healthcare and Hospitals Association and Health Justice Australia. The conference will take place at the Melbourne Covention Centre from 11-13 November and is expected to attract delegates from across the Asia Pacific region.

- Achieving Value for People and Populations
- Implementing Integrated Care
- Empowering and Engaging People and Communities
- Integrated Care Innovations, Models and Systems
- Evaluation, Monitoring and Quality Improvement
- Improving People's Health and Well-being through Integrated Care

The Scientific Committee is now welcoming abstracts of research, policy and practice in the areas of the conference themes. The international committee is made up of recognised experts in the field of integrated care from around the world and they support the development of the programme that reflects the challenges and opportunities experienced by people and organisations that are working towards more coordinated and people-centred services.

Accepted abstracts will appear in the programme as a formal workshop (60 or 90 mins), oral presentation (20 mins), oral poster (inc 5 minutes presentation) or display only poster (no presentation time), as deemed appropriate by the scientific committee.

Note: Special consideration is given to papers that can demonstrate active people involvement in either or all of design, implementation and evaluation!

All accepted abstracts will be published in the International Journal for Integrated Care.

Deadline for submissions is Friday, 28 June.

We need your help with planning for ICIC20!

The International Conference on Integrated Care is now moving into its 20th year. Year on year we strive to improve the learning and networking experiences for delegates. To support us as we grow in both size of attendance and breadth, in terms of countries and disciplines, we would like your help to understand what we can do to make our conference the very best. Please take a couple of moments (only 3 short questions) to tell us about your experience of ICIC19 or other international conferences, and what we can take forward or improve on as we move to Šibenik in Croatia 27 - 29 April 2020. We really appreciate you taking this time and will endeavour to incorporate your feedback and ideas into our planning.

Integrated Care Regulation, Assessment, and Inspection – A Collaborative Learning Journey

An Editorial

by Patricia Sullivan-Taylor

Over the past ten years, the design and implementation of integrated health and social care organisations and systems has occurred across several continents. These models of care have implied the adoption of new approaches to their organization and governance. As a result, many countries have begun to focus specifically on the regulation, assessment and inspection of integrated care. This editorial argues that there is both an opportunity and a need to share the successes and challenges from these experiences and to promote methods for collaborative learning....

How Clinical Integration of Pharmacists in General Practice has Impact on Medication Therapy Management: A Theory-oriented Evaluation

Research and Theory

by Ankie C. M. Hazen, Antoinette A. de Bont, Anne J. Leendertse, Dorien L. M. Zwart, Niek J. de Wit, Johan J. de Gier and Marcel L. Bouvy

Data on medication-related hospital admissions suggest that there is an opportunity for improved pharmaceutical care. Hence, concerns about medication-related hospital admissions is a driver to extend and integrate the role of community pharmacists in general practice.

The aim of this paper is to give a systematic description of 1) what integrating a non-dispensing pharmacist (NDP) in general practice entails and 2) how this integrated care model is expected to contribute to patients' medication therapy management.

Project INTEGRATE: Developing a Framework to Guide Design, Implementation and Evaluation of People-centred Integrated Care Processes

Research and Theory

by Lucinda Cash-Gibson, Olena Tigova, Albert Alonso, George Binkley and Magda Rosenmöller

People-centred integrated care is an acknowledged approach to improve the quality and effectiveness of health systems in delivering care around people's needs and preferences. Nevertheless, more guidance on how to effectively design, implement and evaluate the care process of people-centred integrated care services is needed. Under Project INTEGRATE, a framework was developed to guide managers in the assessment, transformation and delivery of these health service innovations.

Risks Perceived by Frail Male Patients, Family Caregivers and Clinicians in Hospital: Do they Change after Discharge? A Multiple Case Study

Research & Theory

by Véronique Provencher, Monia D'Amours, Chantal Viscogliosi, Manon Guay, Dominique Giroux, Véronique Dubé, Nathalie Delli-Colli, Hélène Corriveau and Mary Egan

Up to 40% of hospitalised seniors are frail and most want to return home after discharge. Inaccurate estimation of risks in the hospital may lead to inadequate support at home. This study aimed to document convergences and divergences between risks and support needs identified before hospital discharge and perceived at home post-discharge.

Citizens as Active Participants in Integrated Care: Challenging the Field's Dominant Paradigms

Research and Theory

by Ludo Glimmerveen, Henk Nies, Sierk Ybema

Policy makers, practitioners and academics often claim that care users and other citizens should be 'at the center' of care integration pursuits. Nonetheless, the field of integrated care tends to approach these constituents as passive recipients of professional and managerial efforts. This paper critically reflects on this discrepancy, which, we contend, indicates both a key objective and an ongoing challenge of care integration; i.e., the need to reconcile (1) the professional, organizational and institutional frameworks by which care work is structured with (2) the diversity and diffuseness that is inherent to pursuits of active user and citizen participation.

L'intégration des services en santé : une approche populationnelle

Book Review

by Paul Wankah

Yves Couturier, Lucie Bonin and Louise Belzile, Montréal : Les Presses de l'Université de Montréal, 2016, pp 264, ISBN: 978-2-7606-3567-8 (paperback, available only in French)

This book, authored by Quebec-based researchers Yves Couturier, Lucie Bonin and Louise Belzile, makes a strong and compelling case for the population-based approach as a fundamental principle of integrated health and social services. The central theme of this book emphasizes that designing, implementing, routinizing, evaluating and sustaining integrated services for individuals and the population necessitates the collective action of multiple stakeholders.

Building your authority: Influencing beyond your role

We know that it is no longer enough just to have a good idea; now it's more about how to work collaboratively with others to use that idea to create change. Our new building your authority course can help you do just that.

This course aims to look at the gap between your passion, commitment and enthusiasm for change and the practical realities of making things happen within the constraints of both your role and the system.

It will help you to understand how to play a meaningful role in your working relationships and how to develop approaches that will help you navigate the complexities of the health and care system.

The School for Change Agents 2019

The School for Change Agents builds change agency which is the power, individually and collectively, to make a difference. It is about pushing the boundaries of what is possible, mobilising others and making change happen more quickly. We are more than a school. We are a movement of 15,000 people in the health sector building a community to create the boldest and most innovative new ideas in health and care. It is the most widely used skill-building programme for change in the NHS. The Community is entirely online, there are five interactive live webinars with the opportunity to catch up with the recordings afterwards.

The School will provide you with the skills, confidence and community to make a difference in an ever-changing and evolving environment, and the skills to implement the NHS Long Term Plan through sharing the latest in change and transformation thinking. You will leave the School with the power to make change in your organisation.

There will also be six modules on our e-learning platform, hosted by Futurelearn, in partnership with the NHS Leadership Academy. This will provide you with the opportunity to further your learning beyond the live webinars, offering opportunities for reflection on how to implement your learning. The entire course is free to join and take part in, to receive accreditation and CPD for these modules, there is a nominal fee of £32. This may be useful for a range of professions, such as revalidation for medical and nursing colleagues. We will make a number of free upgrades available to NHS staff and patients ('experts by experience'). Details of this will follow in due course.

The dates of the live sessions (which will be presented by Helen Bevan and Kathryn Perera) are below:

- 16 May
- 23 May
- 6 June
- 13 June
- 20 June

These will take place at 3pm UK time and recordings of the live sessions will be made available afterwards.

Leading the global
movement for change

You still have time to secure your place at the International Summer School on Integrated Care

ISSIC19 will take place in the heart of Oxford, at Wolfson College, part of the University of Oxford. Summer School begins on Sunday, 23 June, 2019, with a welcome dinner and will run until Friday, 28 June.

This course has been developed for those tasked with designing, implementing, leading and/or managing integrated care and want to learn more about the evidence-based tools and instruments available to them from around the world.

It is aimed at professionals in the field of integrated care, clinicians, researchers and managers, and offers an intensive one-week, stand-alone education and training course on the theory and practice of Integrated Care. It can also contribute towards CPD.

During the course participants will hear from a series of experts in the Integrated care field, including international guest speakers. The syllabus will include a site visit, presentations, case studies and discussions around all aspects of implementing integrated care in your organisation and also offers the unique opportunity to foster international networking and knowledge exchange.

In feedback from this year's Summer School every respondent said they would recommend the course.

Professor Yves Couturier, University of Sherbrooke said:

“Even though I have been involved in research in Integrated care for the past 15 years, I learned a lot at the Summer School. It gave me the chance to discuss international cases studies that were highly relevant to my own work and I have returned with renewed energy.”

To gain an understanding of how the summer school runs and if it sounds like the right option for your career and knowledge development, read Dr Viktoria Stein's reflections on ISSIC18 here.

Call for abstracts: 2nd Interprofessional Education and Collaborative Practice for Africa Conference

You are invited to register and submit an abstract(s) for the 2nd Interprofessional Education and Collaborative Practice for Africa Conference to be held from

- 30 July to 2 August 2019 at the
- Amref International University, Nairobi, Kenya

This conference provides an opportunity for participants to discuss ideas, devise and test strategies to mobilise concerted action to improve health and well-being for individuals, families and communities across Africa.

The conference is driven by the conviction that interprofessional action to improve working together will effect change, enhance quality of care, ensure safety, and optimise deployment of human resources on the continent.

The conference is a collaboration between the Africa Interprofessional Education Network (AfrIPEN), Sigma Theta Tau's International Tau Lambda at Large Chapter , the WHO-FIC Collaborating Centre for the African region and Amref International University. We welcome all health collaboration champions, educators and researchers to Nairobi, Kenya from 30 July to 2 August 2019.

Whether you are a health or social practitioner, service user, student, academic, manager, policy maker or researcher, the conference will inspire and be an opportunity to compare perspectives, exchange experiences, share expertise and transform current understandings.

The overarching theme of the conference is Building an Interprofessional Education and Collaborative Practice culture: from policy to practice. The sub themes look to explore policy as catalyst for interprofessional education and collaborative practice (IPECP); evidence and best practice for IPECP; culture influencing IPECP; and breaking down professional silos for collaborative practice.

- URGENT: Deadline to submit abstract for a preconference workshop: 31 January 2019
- Deadline to submit abstract for an oral, poster (Round 1) or in-conference workshop: 1 March 2019

FELLOWSHIP DIRECTOR

Director of Research & Innovation

Associate Professor of Surgery, Harvard Medical School

Dr. Yule is a leading academic psychologist with specific expertise and training in organizational psychology, human factors science and mixed methods. He is internationally recognized for his research on assessing non-technical skills and patient safety in surgery. Prior to moving to Boston from Scotland, he developed considerable experience studying team performance and safety in industry sectors as diverse as energy, transportation, and healthcare. Most notably, he was one of the pioneers in developing the 'Non-Technical Skills for Surgeons' (NOTSS) behavior observation system, which is now being implemented for surgical education and research in North America, Europe, Australia, Africa and Asia. Dr. Yule is lead author on several seminal papers on the topic and co-founded the Harvard Non-Technical Skills Laboratory, which brings together a multidisciplinary group of scientists who are passionate about studying the impact of non-technical skills on process measures and patient outcomes, as well as implementing scalable interventions to enhance patient safety. Simulation is core to this mission and at STRATUS, Dr. Yule ensures that the curricula are rigorously developed and reviewed to provide the most immersive and beneficial experience for learners. He represents STRATUS nationally in his roles as vice-chair of the American College of Surgeons (ACS) committee on non-technical skills and as Honorary Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh which was awarded in 2019 for his pioneering contribution to education and assessment of non-technical skills globally. Locally, he is also an associate faculty member at the Center for Surgery & Public Health, and Ariadne Labs for Health System Innovation.

DEMIAN SZYLD, MD
Senior Director,
Institute for Medical Simulation
Academic Fellowship in Simulation Education, 11'

The 2-year STRATUS Fellowship and the Masters Degree Education gave me the foundation for an enjoyable and productive academic career. I was able to learn from very experienced and thoughtful faculty and also had enough space to develop my own ideas. In addition to exciting, high level simulation education work at BWH I was also exposed to international collaborations and consulting as well as networking opportunities in the Society for Simulation in Healthcare. Since completing the program I've kept in close contact with the STRATUS team and other alumni and always enjoy the camaraderie and reunions. Choosing STRATUS was a career defining moment and accelerated my career.
